CHIEF EXECUTIVE OFFICER

About Tam

Tam Singer is a life-long animal lover and dedicated animal welfare professional. Originally from the United Kingdom where she studied Communications at Nottingham Trent University. She moved to Nashville, Tennessee in 2004. While working full time in recruiting, she also founded a non-profit organization, Make Tennessee a Place that Really Cares, or MTPRC. The organization focused on improving the lives of animals through community outreach and education. Through MTPRC, Tam advocated to end Breed Specific Legislation and ban the chaining of dogs.

More recently Tam worked in the corporate sector as the Director of Recruiting for a large billion-dollar global organization. In 2017, Tam relocated to Kansas City to join Great Plains SPCA as the Chief Operations Officer. Since 2018 she has led the organization as Chief Executive Officer, where she has fostered a culture of kindness and accountability. Tam has earned the Humane Hero award from NashvillePAW magazine and Doing Good, a volunteer non-profit in Nashville, for her efforts to improve animal welfare. Tam currently serves on the Board of the Kansas Pet Advocates. In 2023 Tam was appointed by Mayor Skoog of Overland Park to be part of the Racial Equity in Community Program as part of the United Community Services of Johnson County. In November 2024, Tam was featured in KC Magazine's 10 Kansas City Power Players You Haven't Heard Of \(Yet\).

She currently resides in Kansas City with her husband, daughter, and their pets.
